Prayers Still Needed

Please continue to keep Father Angelo in your prayers. He is currently breathing on his own and no longer intubated, He will follow simple commands such as blinking when asked but doctors are skeptical. He has a long road ahead and it is unknown the extent of brain damage. The plan is to transfer him to a hospital in Croatia possibly by end of the week.

St. Elizabeth of Portugal was the daughter of the king of Aragon. At twelve she married King Denis of Portugal, a profligate man who tolerated his wife's piety while making no secret of his own infidelities. Elizabeth bore two children, a son and a daughter. Her son, Alfonso, would later come close to open rebellion against his neglectful father. For her role in effecting a reconciliation between father and son, Elizabeth became popularly known as "the Peacemaker." But her peacemaking talents were exercised on an even greater level when she personally prevented a war between Portugal and Castile.

Elizabeth lived up to her public responsibilities as queen. But the greater part of her time was spent in prayer and a variety of charitable projects. She established hospitals, orphanages, and religious houses throughout the kingdom, as well as halfway homes for "fallen women."

When her husband fell seriously ill in 1324, she devotedly nursed him until his death the following year. After making a pilgrimage to Compostela, she put on the habit of a Franciscan tertiary and lived for her eleven remaining years in one of the monasteries she had helped to found. She emerged occasionally to intercede between rival monarchs—with most of whom she bore some relation. Even as she lived she was credited with numerous miracles, and she was revered by the people of Portugal. She died in 1336 and was canonized three centuries later by Pope Urban VIII, who named her the Patroness of Peace.
